Overview

Comparison Challenge

This document is a supplement to the comparison challenge conducted using the most popular document comparison products. As outlined in the white paper, 'Compare the Comparison' Challenge, the focus of the challenge was to test each comparison product to determine how well each performed against complex documents, specifically created with challenging document elements and well known problem areas which have a long history of resulting in incorrect comparison reporting. This supplement provides the technical details report on the results of the challenge and real time examples of how well each product performed. The results are for illustration purposes only and are geared toward helping potential customers determine the value-add of each product when determining their business comparison needs.

Each product has been evaluated using the following criteria:

- Comparison Accuracy
- Comparison Readability
- Formatting Preservation

Comparison Accuracy

When performing a document comparison the results given to another user needs to be accurate. The software must accurately detect changes made from one document to another and list the changes that have been identified. For example any change made to the header of a document or to footnotes or endnotes would need to be accurately detected. Likewise cells in a table which have been modified, it is equally important that the software recognizes the difference between the documents. If the software application inaccurately identifies changes made to a modified document or if any detail is missing or not detected this would naturally decrease the accuracy of the software program or application.

Analyzing the results of a comparison report or redlined document helps the users to understand the accuracy of the comparison detail within the software program or application. To aid in understanding the results, all changes that have been recognized by the application have been recorded; and likewise those changes that have not been recognized have also been recorded. These results breakdown has been provided at the end of this product comparison and will give users an indication as to how each program performs in document comparison.

Comparison Readability

When reviewing the comparison report or redlined document, the user need to be able to understand the information within the document that has changes with ease. For example, any changes made to the text of a paragraph, with no mind to the amount of changes, should be accurately and easily understood by the user.

Formatting preservation

Formatting preservation is the final criteria used to determine whether the comparison report or the redlined document preserved the format of the original and modified documents. For example, whether paragraph alignment has been kept intact, page orientation maintained, and whether images or object has been compromised.

Each product was tested with the same materials and equipment to ensure fairness and reliability.

CORRECT RESULTS: Novo Compare correctly depicts the changes.	INCORRECT RESULTS: Litéra ChangePro incorrect depicts the changes; the paragraph alignment of the inverted pyramid has been compromised, as well as the preceding paragraph.
